If you demand my compliance on a matter of law, it is your duty, not mine to show me the relevant orders

The moment you have alleged criminal breach and informed of potential prosecution, you invoked my article 6 rights, including my absolute right to counsel

Provide counsel

You are the last divisional garda station pursuant to my visit to Ireland but the fact I left the jurisdiction does not excuse you from your legal obligations

YOU HAVE NO LEGAL RIGHT TO DEMAND OF ME ANYTHING, IT IS TO YOU TO PROVE OTHERWISE!

[03/02/2025 16:07] Peter Dunne: Under Irish law, specifically the Extradition Act 1965, the rule of specialty restricts the prosecution of an extradited individual to only those offenses for which extradition was explicitly granted. Without the explicit consent of the extraditing country, Ireland is prohibited from charging, prosecuting, or otherwise restricting the defendant for any offenses committed prior to their surrender that differ from those specified in the extradition request.

Section 20(1) of the Extradition Act 1965 articulates this principle:

> "Extradition shall not be granted unless provision is made by the law of the requesting country or by the extradition agreement—

> (a) that the person claimed shall not be proceeded against, sentenced or detained with a view to the carrying out of a sentence or detention order, or otherwise restricted in his personal freedom, for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than that for which his extradition is requested..."

This means that, without authorization from the extraditing country, Irish authorities cannot prosecute the defendant for offenses involving a victim of a different age or for any other offense not specified in the original extradition request. To pursue additional charges, Ireland must seek and obtain the consent of the extraditing country, adhering to the procedures outlined in the relevant extradition treaties and agreements.

Therefore, without such authorization, Irish law prohibits taking any legal action against the defendant for offenses beyond those for which they were extradited.

Provide Extradition Papers matching the Irish case prior to the date I was charged on the matter of KK24/03, I was extradited for a different case involving a non-existent victim

[03/02/2025 16:12] Peter Dunne: Remember you are the one demanding I comply with your limitation of my freedoms and liberty for a case other than that for which I was extradited, the duty is on you, not me to provide authority for doing so, you are non compliant, COMPLY

This message is from an EXTERNAL SENDER - be CAUTIOUS, particularly with links and attachments.

To:

Detective Inspector David Finnerty
An Garda Síochána

Subject: Formal Legal Demand under Article 6 ECHR – Criminal Complaint Against Garda John Costello, Demand for Disclosure and Validation of Legal Authority

Dear Detective Inspector Finnerty,

I write pursuant to the WhatsApp correspondence received from Garda John Costello, which constitutes an act under colour of law and purports to impose criminal obligations without due process or legal disclosure.

Exhibit A – WhatsApp Message from Garda John Costello (Attached)

The message reads:

“Peter, just talking to the Sex Offender Management Unit in Dublin. They have advised me that your message on Monday will put you in breach of the Sex Offender Act as amended by tomorrow. You will have to attend immediately as in today to the nearest Divisional Garda Station to complete a new Section 10 Notification with your current address. Even if that's a hotel room, rented property, after 3 days with no current address advised to An Garda Síochána, I will have to create a breach incident and an investigation file for directions (even in your absence). I will be in touch with the Management unit tomorrow and they will advise me if you have completed the Section 10 Notification or not. Also at minimum 3 days prior to leaving the jurisdiction, you need to provide the exact address you will be moving to, prior to moving. For your information and attention. John Costello Garda.”

This communication, by asserting an enforceable obligation with the threat of criminal consequence, constitutes a formal procedural act under Irish criminal law and therefore fully triggers my rights under Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights, as implemented by the ECHR Act 2003 (Ireland).

1. Invocation of Article 6 ECHR – Right to Counsel and Full Disclosure

The written correspondence I received from Garda John Costello (Exhibit A) initiates a formal criminal process under Irish law, with explicit threats of enforcement action and the creation of a criminal investigation file. This constitutes a de facto invocation of criminal proceedings.

Accordingly, and without prejudice, I formally invoke:

- The right to immediate and effective legal counsel;
- The right to be clearly and fully informed of the nature and cause of any accusation or legal obligation allegedly breached;
- The right to the full and timely disclosure of all materials relied upon by the State or its agents, including warrants, court orders, and any documentary or evidentiary basis for your claims;
- The right to a fair and public hearing before any determination affecting my rights, liberty, or legal standing.

These rights are not conditional and are guaranteed under Article 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) and Irish constitutional law, as confirmed and enforced in the following authorities:

- DPP v Gormley & White [2014] IESC 17: The Supreme Court ruled that the right to legal representation is triggered from the moment an individual becomes the subject of Garda investigation, and that Gardaí must not proceed with questioning or investigatory steps without ensuring the individual's right to legal counsel has been meaningfully enabled. The court reaffirmed that effective access to legal rights must occur from the outset of any criminal process.
- DPP v Doyle [2017] IESC 1: The Court underscored the State's positive obligation to facilitate access to legal advice, and that it is not enough to merely offer or reference such rights. They must be actively enabled. The ruling also makes clear that the existence of a court order or alleged duty is insufficient without the actual order being produced to the person concerned. In legal terms: “assertion of an order is not proof of its content or legality.”

The State (O'Callaghan) v District Justice Ó Buachalla [1977] IR 42: A foundational judgment confirming that liberty cannot be curtailed except in full accordance with the law, and that any process seeking to do so must be grounded in clear, lawfully valid and procedurally compliant documentation. The onus lies with the State to demonstrate that its actions are lawful and that the orders it invokes meet constitutional standards.

Salduz v Turkey [2008] ECHR 1542: The European Court of Human Rights ruled that access to a lawyer must be granted from the first moment a person is confronted with suspicion by the State, and that failure to do so renders the entire process incompatible with Article 6 ECHR. This ruling is binding on Ireland through the ECHR Act 2003.

Given the above, I therefore:

Demand immediate appointment or recognition of legal counsel;

Request full disclosure of all relevant materials, including but not limited to:

The conviction and sentence certificate (Exhibit B);

All warrants, court judgments, bench warrants or statutory instruments issued or relied upon in this matter;

Confirmation that the above materials fully comply with Irish law, the Rules of Court, and Articles 5 and 6 of the European Convention on Human Rights;

Request confirmation of the exact statutory or legal provision I am alleged to be in breach of, including the text of any order or provision being enforced.

2. Formal Criminal Complaint – Garda John Costello

I now submit a formal criminal complaint against Garda John Costello for:

Malfeasance in public office;

Acting ultra vires, without lawful warrant or notification;

Perversion of the course of justice, including:

- Failing to disclose applicable court orders;
- Asserting legal obligations without lawful basis;
- Denying access to legal representation in violation of Article 6 ECHR.

Unless the requisite remedial actions are taken — including counsel appointment and full disclosure — I will treat his correspondence as evidence of criminal misconduct.

3. Verification of Conviction Certificate – Exhibit B (Attached)

I now ask that you formally confirm that the attached Conviction and Sentence Certificate dated 19 October 2007 (Exhibit B) is in fact:

The document upon which current obligations and actions are based;
2.
Accurate in its statement of:
 - Defendant's identity and place of origin;
 - Offence and legal characterisation;
 - Applicable law and sentence;
3.
That it was lawfully issued and meets all requirements of:
 - Irish Court Rules;
 - The European Convention on Human Rights Act 2003, Articles 5 and 6;
 - UK law, including the Human Rights Act 1998 and PACE 1984, insofar as the extradition originates from UK proceedings.

You are further required to provide:

Certified copies of all warrants, court judgments, extradition orders, notifications, and statutory documents relevant to the matter known as KK24/03, including but not limited to:

The 2003 Extradition Warrant;

Any and all bench warrants issued in 2007;

The 2008 European Arrest Warrant;

All orders or notifications under the Sex Offender Act 2001 or amendments thereof.

You are to confirm that each document:

Was properly served;

Contains accurate and verified identity details;

Was issued under proper jurisdictional authority.

Failure to provide these documents violates well-established constitutional and procedural law.

4. Disclosure Obligations – Judicial Authority, Extradition Compliance, and Full Cross-Jurisdictional Verification Required

Where a person's liberty, residence, or legal obligations are affected by court orders or statutory powers, it is a settled matter of Irish, UK, and European law that the relevant order must be fully disclosed and lawfully served. This principle takes on enhanced significance where the matter originates from or relies upon extradition proceedings or international cooperation, as in this case.

A. Requirement of Actual Production of Orders – Irish Law

It is not legally sufficient for An Garda Síochána to assert the existence of a court order, extradition direction, or statutory obligation. The affected individual must be furnished with the actual document(s) upon which compliance is being compelled. See:

DPP v Doyle [2017] IESC 1: Gardaí must provide the actual court order in circumstances where they seek to rely upon it. Asserting the existence of such an order without production is constitutionally insufficient.

DPP v Gormley & White [2014] IESC 17: The right to legal advice and the right to fair procedures attach from the very start of a criminal investigation or enforcement process. This includes access to the documents forming the legal basis of that process.

The State (O'Callaghan) v Ó Buachalla [1977] IR 42: Liberty may only be curtailed by lawful and properly documented procedures, strictly applied.

B. Extradition Origin – Proof of Cross-Jurisdictional Compliance Required

This matter originates in extradition proceedings in the United Kingdom, specifically:

2003 extradition warrant and proceedings in Nuneaton Court, England;

2008 and 2009 European Arrest Warrant proceedings and related orders.

As such, I require proof and confirmation that these proceedings fully complied with:

The Human Rights Act 1998 (UK), including Articles 5 and 6 ECHR, incorporated into UK law, guaranteeing the right to liberty, fair trial, and procedural disclosure;

PACE 1984 (UK) – in particular, the duty to disclose all evidence, identification materials, and grounds for arrest before any committal for extradition;

The Extradition Act 2003 (UK) – including sections requiring judicial scrutiny of the identity, evidence, and legal sufficiency of requests;

The European Arrest Warrant Act 2003 (Ireland) and the EU Framework Decision 2002/584/JHA, especially the rule of speciality, which prevents prosecution or detention for matters not specified in the warrant.

I require immediate confirmation that the English courts and the defendant were provided with all identifying materials and factual particulars at the time of the 2003 and 2008/2009 hearings. This includes but is not limited to:

The full and accurate name, date of birth, address, and nationality of the person named in the warrant;

- The age and description of the alleged offence, and that it matches the documents and allegations relied upon in both jurisdictions;
- The full factual matrix upon which the extradition was granted, as per the requirements of Article 8 of the European Convention on Extradition and Article 15 of the EAW Framework Decision;
- That all obligations imposed now, in Ireland, arise solely and lawfully from the limited terms of the original extradition and no more.

Where the rule of speciality is not respected—i.e. if proceedings now relate to matters not disclosed or permitted in the extradition orders—any enforcement action is ultra vires and unlawful, as it violates the basis upon which surrender was judicially authorised.

C. Immediate Disclosure and Legal Authority Demanded

Until and unless all of the following are provided, no lawful obligation arises and no compliance can be demanded:

1. A certified copy of any court order, statutory obligation, or extradition-based direction upon which you rely;
2. Confirmation that such order(s) have been lawfully served;
3. Proof that the requirements of both Irish and English law (including those of the HRA 1998, PACE 1984, Extradition Act 2003, EAW Act 2003, and ECHR 2003) have been fully and faithfully observed;
4. Confirmation of the exact provision of law I am alleged to be in breach of, and the identity, address, and charge particulars of the person named in those orders.

Failure to comply with these disclosure duties and statutory protections invalidates any purported legal action, and may constitute misconduct in public office.

5. Legal Actions and Notice of Evaluation

You are hereby advised that legal action will ensue at the time of my choosing, and that your correspondence, along with that of Garda Costello, will be cited as evidence of:

Violation of the principle of speciality in extradition;

Withholding of exculpatory evidence for over 22 years in breach of:

The UK Human Rights Act 1998

The Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984

The Irish Constitution

The ECHR Act 2003

Failure to inform me of the reasons for arrest on no fewer than four separate occasions, violating:

Article 5(2) HRA 1998 (UK)

Article 5 & 6 ECHR (Ireland and UK)

These constitute ongoing and compounding violations of legal and constitutional rights, potentially rendering all underlying proceedings void ab initio.

Unless full corrective action is taken — including legal representation, document disclosure, and validation of all legal bases — I will proceed accordingly.

PROVIDE COPY OF THE COURT ORDERS PURSUANT TO KK24/03 INCLUDING AND SPECIFICALLY THE SENTENCE

If you demand my compliance on a matter of law, it is your duty, not mine to show me the relevant orders

The moment you have alleged criminal breach and informed of potential prosecution, you invoked my article 6 rights, including my absolute right to counsel

Provide counsel

You are the last divisional garda station pursuant to my visit to Ireland but the fact I left the jurisdiction does not excuse you from your legal obligations

YOU HAVE NO LEGAL RIGHT TO DEMAND OF ME ANYTHING. IT IS TO YOU TO PROVE OTHERWISE!

Under Irish law, specifically the Extradition Act 1965, the *rule of specialty restricts the prosecution of an extradited individual to only those offenses for which extradition was explicitly granted. Without the explicit consent of the extraditing country, Ireland is prohibited from charging, prosecuting, or otherwise restricting the defendant for any offenses committed prior to their surrender that differ from those specified in the extradition request.

Section 20(1) of the Extradition Act 1965 articulates this principle:

> "Extradition shall not be granted unless provision is made by the law of the requesting country or by the extradition agreement—

> (a) that the person claimed shall not be proceeded against, sentenced or detained with a view to the carrying out of a sentence or detention order, or otherwise restricted in his

Without the explicit consent of the extraditing country, Ireland is prohibited from charging, prosecuting, or otherwise restricting the defendant for any offenses committed prior to their surrender that differ from those specified in the extradition request.

Section 20(1) of the Extradition Act 1965 articulates this principle:

> (a) that the person claimed shall not be proceeded against, sentenced or detained with a view to the carrying out of a sentence or detention order, or otherwise restricted in his personal freedom, for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than that for which his extradition is requested..."

This means that, without authorization from the extraditing country, Irish authorities cannot prosecute the defendant for offenses involving a victim of a different age or for any other offense not specified in the original extradition request. To pursue additional charges, Ireland must seek and obtain the consent of the extraditing country, adhering to the procedures outlined in the relevant extradition treaties and agreements.

Therefore, without such authorization, Irish law prohibits taking any legal action against the defendant for offenses beyond those for which they were extradited.

Provide Extradition Papers matching the Irish case prior to the date I was charged on the matter of KK24/03, I was extradited for a different case involving a non-existent victim
